^{XIV} Obama estimates $113 billion in direct costs/per year at current U.S. troop levels of 100,000. If those troop levels are halved by 2013, then the direct costs will remain over $50 billion/per year. An additional three years would therefore cost at least $200 billion more. Using the Stiglitz/Bilmes methodology for measuring indirect—accrual—costs, such as veterans' health care and benefits, interest payments, etc—would add hundreds of billions in long-term costs, making Afghanistan another $1 trillion dollar war.
